STOYAN GANEV (Bulgaria)

Mr. Stoyan Ganev, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Bulgaria, was born on 23 July 1955, in Pazardjik, Bulgaria. In 1973 he finished Secondary School of Mathematics and in 1979 graduated from the Faculty of Law at Sofia University "St. Climent Ohridsky". In 1985 he defended a thesis on Constitutional Law at Moscow University. After that he was a lecturer on Constitutional Law at Sofia University.

Mr. Ganev is one of the most prominent and radical leaders of the anti-communist opposition in Bulgaria. Since January 1990 he has been Chairman of the United Democratic Centre—a Christian Democratic Party in the structure of the ruling opposition coalition—the Union of Democratic Forces.

At the general elections on 17 June 1990, Mr. Ganev was elected deputy to the Grand National Assembly according to the majority system. He became Co-Chairman of the Parliamentary Group of the Union of Democratic Forces in the Grand National Assembly. He was elected deputy to the 36th National Assembly at the next general elections.

On 8 November 1991, Mr. Ganev was sworn in as Minister and Foreign Minister of the Republic of Bulgaria in the first non-communist cabinet in 47 years. Until July 1992 he was Deputy Prime Minister as well.

Mr. Ganev is Chairman of a coordinating body on Bulgaria's accession to the Council of Europe. He is the chief envoy of the Government in the negotiations on Bulgaria's association with the EC.

Mr. Ganev is pursuing a policy of dynamic contacts. During his visits to the NATO Headquarters in Brussels on 12 November 1991, he launched the idea of convening a tripartite meeting of the Foreign Ministers of Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey.

On 20 December 1991, he attended the Inaugural Session of the North Atlantic Cooperation Council in Brussels. At his proposal two items were included in the Concluding Document—the need to render all-round assistance for the success of the economic reforms in Eastern Europe and the primary importance of the regional security structures as an element of the European security architecture.

Mr. Ganev attended the opening of the Fourth Follow-up Helsinki Meeting of the CSCE Member States (24-26 March 1992). In his statement he substantiated the need for promoting the CSCE process in south-eastern Europe by convening a forum of the Balkan States and the countries adjoining the region, in which representatives of authoritative international organizations and institutions also took part.

During his official visit to Egypt (22-26 December 1991), Mr. Ganev proposed Bulgaria to be the host of bilateral and multilateral talks in the framework of the Middle East peace process.

Mr. Ganev has actively supported the view on enhancing the role of the United Nations for consolidating world peace and security, for greater effectiveness of the world organization in finding a solution to political, socio-economic, environmental and other problems. Guided by the understanding that all Member States could contribute to this end, the Bulgarian Foreign Minister works actively for enhancing Bulgaria's input in all United Nations activities.

Mr. Ganev has been invited to prestigious international organizations such as the German Foundation Konrad Adenauer and Rotary International, where he delivered lectures on issues of international politics and law.

Mr. Ganev is married and has one daughter.

UNITED NATIONS

FORTY-SEVENTH SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

TO CONVENE ON 15 SEPTEMBER 1992

UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY OPENS ON 15 SEPTEMBER 1992

The General Assembly of the United Nations opens its forty-seventh session on 15 September at United Nations Headquarters in New York. It brings together the delegations of all Member States, many of them led by Heads of Government or Foreign Ministers, for an examination of international issues.

FORUM FOR MULTILATERAL NEGOTIATION

The General Assembly, set up in 1945 under the United Nations Charter, is the United Nations' main deliberative organ and provides a forum for multilateral discussion of the full range of international issues covered by the Charter. The Assembly comprises all Members of the United Nations and meets in regular session each year from September to December, and thereafter as required.

FUNCTIONS AND POWERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The functions and powers of the United Nations General Assembly, as set out in the Charter, include:

- to consider and make recommendations on the general principles of cooperation for maintaining international peace and security, including disarmament
- to discuss any question relating to international peace and security and, except where a dispute or situation is currently being discussed by the Security Council, to make recommendations on it
- to discuss, with the same exception, and make recommendations on any questions within the scope of the Charter or affecting the powers and functions of any organ of the United Nations
- to initiate studies and make recommendations to promote international political cooperation, the development and codification of international law, the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms and international collaboration in the economic, social, cultural, education and health fields
- to make recommendations for the peaceful settlement of any situation which might impair friendly relations among nations
- to receive and consider reports from the Security Council and other United Nations organs
- to consider and approve the United Nations budget and establish the financial assessments of Member States
- to elect the non-permanent members of the Security Council and the members of other United Nations Councils and organs and, on the recommendation of the Security Council, to appoint the Secretary-General.

Pursuant to its "Uniting for Peace" resolution of November 1950, the Assembly may also take action if the Security Council fails to act, owing to the negative vote of a permanent member, in a case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace or act of aggression. The Assembly can consider the matter immediately with a view to making recommendations to Members for collective measures to maintain or restore international peace and security.

While the Assembly is empowered only to make non-binding recommendations to States on international issues within its competence, it has, none the less, initiated actions—political, economic, humanitarian, social and legal—which have affected the lives of millions of people throughout the world.

SEVEN MAIN COMMITTEES

After the election of its President and Vice-Presidents, and after the adoption of its agenda, the General Assembly commences its session with a three-week period of general debate, providing Member States with the opportunity to air their views on major international issues.

With the close of the general debate, the Assembly begins consideration of the substantive items on its agenda. Because of the great number of questions which it is called upon to consider (149 separate agenda items at the 46th session, for example), the Assembly distributes most substantive questions among its seven Main Committees, which discuss them, seeking where possible to harmonize the various approaches of States, and then present draft resolutions for consideration to a plenary meeting of the Assembly.

The First Committee is concerned with disarmament and related international security questions, the Second with economic questions, the Third with social and humanitarian issues, the Fourth with decolonization, the Fifth with the administration and budget of the United Nations and the Sixth with international legal matters. A Special Political Committee deals with a variety of political subjects not dealt with by the First Committee.

On a number of agenda items, however, such as apartheid, the question of Palestine and the situation in the Middle East, the Assembly acts directly in its plenary meetings.

There is also a General Committee, composed of the President and 21 Vice-Presidents of the Assembly and the Chairpersons of the seven Main Committees, which makes recommendations to the Assembly about the adoption of the agenda, the allocation of items and the organization of work, and a Credentials Committee, appointed by the President at each session. The latter Committee reports to the Assembly on the credentials of representatives.

THE SEARCH FOR CONSENSUS

Each Member State in the Assembly has one vote. Votes taken on designated important issues, such as recommendations on peace and security and the election of Security Council members, require a two-thirds majority of Member States, but other questions are decided by simple majority.

In recent years a special effort has been made to achieve consensus on issues, rather than requiring a formal vote, thus strengthening support for the Assembly's decisions. The President consults delegations to see whether they are willing to agree to the adoption of a resolution without a vote. If they are, he can formally propose that the resolution be so adopted.

REGIONAL GROUPS

Over the years various informal regional groupings have evolved in the General Assembly as vehicles for consultation and to facilitate procedural work. The groups are the African States, the Asian States, the Eastern European States, the Latin American and Caribbean States, and the Western European and other States. For election purposes, the United States is considered a part of the Western European and other States. Turkey, which for election purposes is in the Western European Group, is also a member of the Asian Group. The post of President of the General Assembly rotates among the regional groups (during the forty-seventh session, the President will be from the Group of Eastern European States).

SPECIAL SESSIONS AND EMERGENCY SPECIAL SESSIONS

In addition to its regular sessions, the Assembly may meet in special and emergency sessions.

At turning points over the years, the Assembly has convened 18 special sessions on issues which demanded particular attention, including problems of Palestine, United Nations finances, Namibia, disarmament, international economic cooperation, apartheid and drugs.

Nine emergency special sessions have addressed situations in which the Security Council found itself deadlocked, namely the Middle East (1958 and 1967), Hungary (1956), Suez (1956), the Congo (1960), Afghanistan (1980), Palestine (1980), Namibia (1981) and the occupied Arab territories (1982).

CARRYING ON THE WORK OF THE ASSEMBLY

The work of the United Nations derives largely from the decisions of the General Assembly and is carried out:

- by committees and other bodies established by the Assembly to study and report on specific issues, such as disarmament, outer space, peace-keeping, economic development, human rights and apartheid
- in international conferences called for by the Assembly, and
- by the Secretariat of the United Nations—the Secretary-General and his staff of international civil servants.
